PLAN CAMPAIGN TO CHECK SPREAD OF DREADED DISEASE

Federal and State Aid Pledged in Fight on Bovine Tuberculosis in County.

Federal and state aid as far as possible to eradicate bovine tuberculosis in cattle in St. Joseph county was pledged Saturday at a conference between Dr. L. C. Julien, state veterinarian, Dr. E. B. McKim, of the bureau of animal husbandry, U. S. department of agriculture, and officials of the county farm bureau.

The campaign to wipe out the menace among cattle in this district was warmly commended by both officials as a decisive move in the protection of the public health and the economic value which results to the farmer in having cattle tested for the presence of tubercular germs.

It was pointed out that because of the limited federal appropriation available to cover indemnities, no definite assurance could be given concerning the amount which could be allotted to carry on the work in this county. However, every cooperation was promised and it is believed that the county farm bureau will be able to proceed with its campaign.

Emergency Funds. Dr. Hoskins explained that the work on a nation-wide basis was being conducted now from funds of an emergency appropriation of $600,000. This amount, it was said, would be expended in districts where it was most urgent. The country is divided into prescribed areas and sums set aside according to conditions as recommended by state and federal officials to the secretary of agriculture at Washington.

Benefits of the campaign have been of such splendid value to farmers and the public generally, particularly in the matter of a pure milk distribution, that a large appropriation to extend the work is expected to become available at the beginning of the next fiscal year, July 1. With more money to meet indemnities after the date indicated, it is confidently expected that St. Joseph county will be among the first in which a regular veterinarian of the bureau of animal husbandry will be assigned to complete the work.

Cattle Given Test. According to Eugene C. Bird, agricultural agent, 637 cattle have been given the tuberculin test. Of this number, 61 reactors were found. Out of 49 herds subjected to the test, 17 reactors resulted. These figures show that eight and three-quarters per cent of the number tested.

In the light of this showing, it was pointed out that the necessity for continuing the campaign was of vital public interest.

Thomas H. Jackson, president of the county bureau, told the officials that the situation in this county demanded attention and hoped that a substantial part of the available funds allotted to Indiana would be diverted to use here. While no definite promise was made, the officials evidenced every desire to push the campaign forward as rapidly as conditions would permit.

Both the federal and state representatives declared they were not unresponsive to the importance of including the campaign and agreed with other eminent medical and health authorities that the only way to eradicate the disease was by the application of the tuberculin test. Effective means to destroy the possibility of the spread of dangerous tubercular germs from infected cattle was slaughter of the animals thus killing the disease at its source.

It was stated that the farm bureau had enough applications from farmers asking that their cattle be tested to keep a federal veterinarian busy for some time.

ATHENS, Jan. 8.—Teaching the Greeks to be Greeks. That's the job Mrs. Eva Palmer Sikellianos has picked out for herself.

She's the wife of Angelo Sikellianos, Greek poet, who's called the D'Annunzio of Greece. But she's an American woman. She's the daughter of the late Cortlandt Palmer of New York, prominent in artistic and intellectual circles and founder of the Nineteenth Century Club.

Clad in ancient Greek robes and with sandals on her feet, Mrs. Sikellianos is trying to arouse in modern Greek women the spirit of classic Greece.

"We're all talking about bettering the world, but we don't have to seek new things," Mrs. Sikellianos says. "We have only to adapt what the ancient Greeks taught."

"It isn't so much what they did, but how they lived. They knew how to choose."

Mrs. Sikellianos will place her son, Glaukos in an American university.

"Because," she says, "democratic ancient Greece and democratic modern America have much in common."

URGE HARDING TO WIELD BIG STICK
Tighter Reign on G. O. P. is Now Needed, Administration Men Feel.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 8.—Pres't Harding is being urged by administration leaders in congress and newspapers to "wield the big stick" to take an immediate hold on the political reins of the party and more forcibly assert his powers.

The death of Sen. Penrose, the expected resignation of Postmaster C. B. Felt, and the established strength of the bloc activities in congress have combined to cause grave anxiety to administration leaders.

With the passing of Penrose, following so closely the death of Sen. Knox, the administration has only Sen. Lodge of the old-time leaders in the upper branch of congress, and his leadership signals failed in the last session.

In the lower branch the President's course has been obstructed through bad advice from his lieutenants. Defeat of his recommendations for a 50 percent reduction in surtaxes after he had been prevailed upon to write a letter so recommending.

Blocs are Growing Stronger. Meantime, machinery has fallen into the hands of blocs and individuals, capable of directing legislation whether to the liking of the president and other administration leaders or not. This bloc action, to no small extent dictated by resentment of the middle and far west to "old guard" leadership, is the gravest cause of concern.

It is not denied by administration leaders that Harding can have the re-nomination in 1923 if he wishes. Nor is it denied that, as the outlook shapes up now, there will be serious reductions in the republican majorities in both senate and house in the elections next fall.

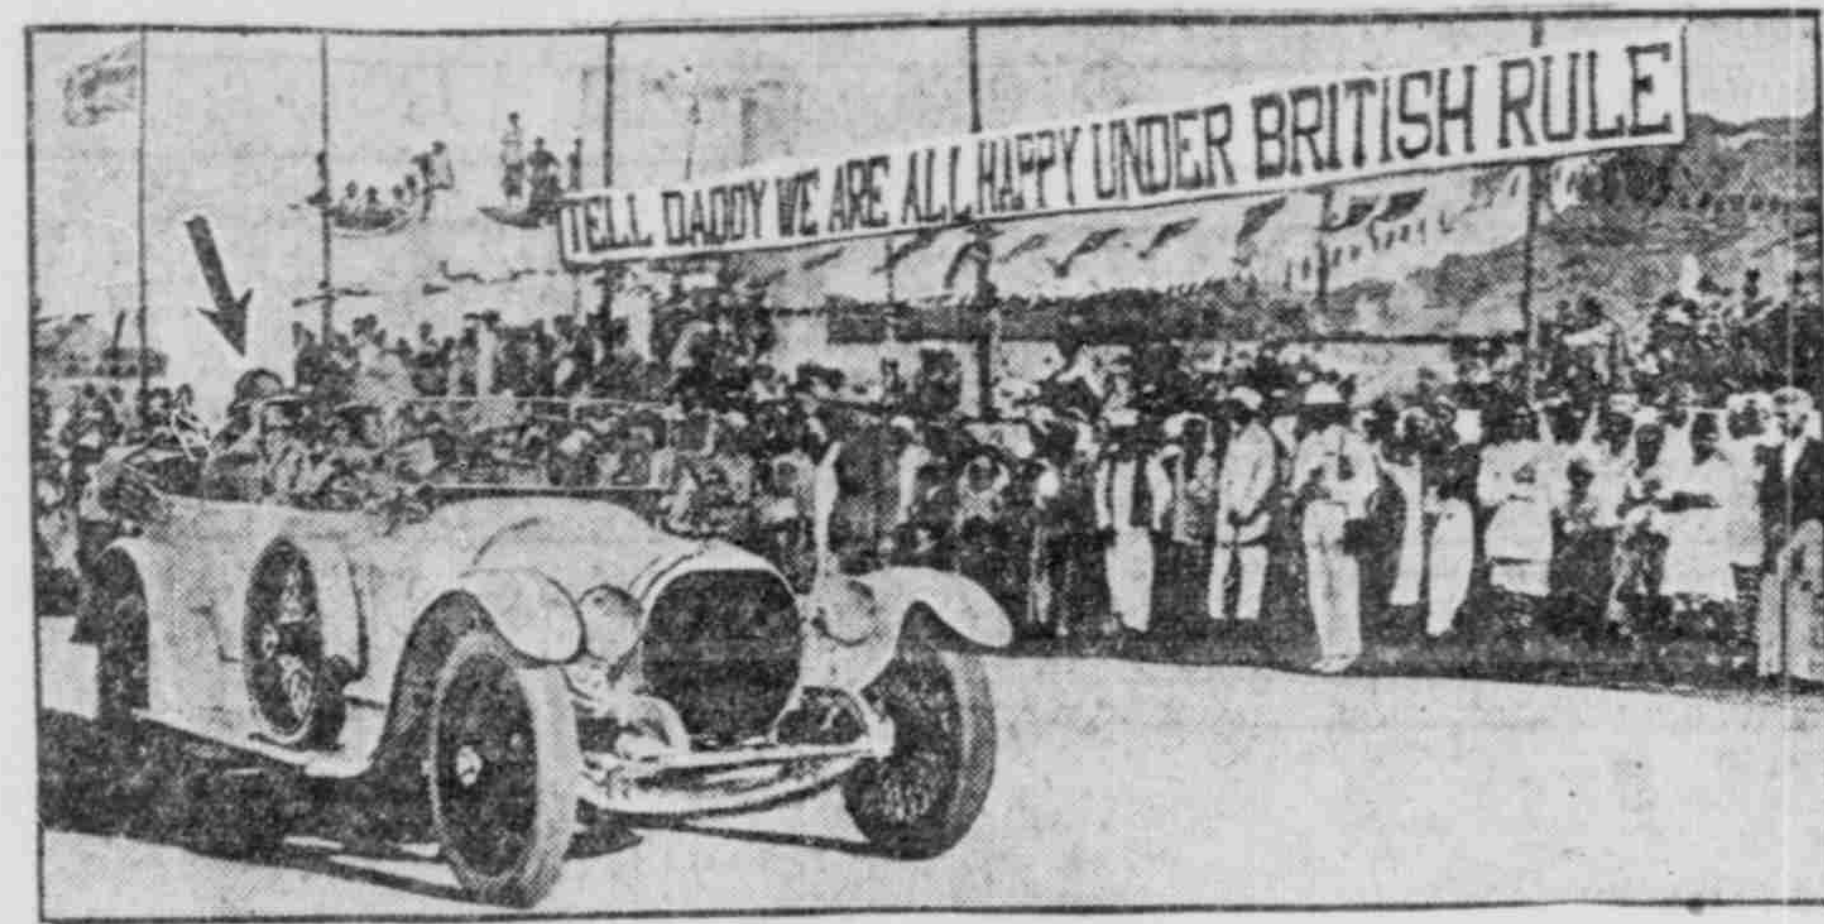

It is the fear of administration leaders now, however, that in the losses expected next fall there will be a reaction which will have its effect upon 1923. Within the old guard ranks themselves there are some serious contests expected. From his standpoint of 1923, the contest Sen. New faces in Indiana against former Sen. Beveridge for the republican senatorial nomination stands out.

Allen a Figure to Watch. Gov. Allen of Kansas is a figure to be watched in 1923, and he is geographically "right" in so far as the agricultural bloc is concerned. Sen. Capper of Kansas already has warned that if 1924 does not prove to be another 1912, the administration must move forward with progressive legislation for the people are clamoring for it.

Republican leaders admit frankly it is all a question of leadership, and under existing circumstances, they declare, Pres't Harding must assert it and assert it far more forcibly than he has to date.

LLOYD GEORGE IS ORGANIZING PARTY

Collapse of Coalition Will Not Necessarily Mean Premier's Downfall.

LONDON, Jan. 8.—The political future of the prime minister is the most talked of subject throughout Great Britain. When he appeals to the country for a new lease of power within the next few months, will he be able to retain his position?

The coalition government is quickly breaking up. It is hated by liberals and Tories, while labor will have nothing to do with it. It is so unpopular that no candidate at an election dare brand himself as a coalitionist.

Neither the Irish settlement nor the results of the Washington conference have increased the standing of the government in the slightest degree.

Therefore, the premier, without a party or organization of his own, finds himself apparently tied to a mass of unpopularity, which must break into its component parts—thus ceasing to exist—and he, either singly or as a whole, snowed under in the coming fight. Lloyd George is far too astute to be caught in this fashion. When the coalition breaks Lloyd George will be a leader without a party. Therefore he has decided to form a party of his own.

Churchill a Favorite. To do this he has had to find his chief adherents. First of all he has picked those members whom he does not need. Of these, Austen Chamberlain comes first. He is unpopular and would permeate the new party with the old Toryism. Lord Curzon comes next. Useful in some ways, he is a Jonah when it comes to active politics.

Balfour doesn't matter either way—he is a very old man. Worthington Evans, secretary of the war department, and Stanley Baldwin, secretary of the board of trade; Lord Lee of Fareham are three fairly able mediocrities.

The two men whose cooperation stood out as absolutely necessary are Winston Churchill and Lord Birkhead. Next to the premier they are the two most powerful forces in British politics. Both are marked out for the premiership, and Lloyd George says that he does not mind which gets it after he is through with the job.

Progressive Tendency. Then came Sir Robert Horne, who within a few years has risen to be chancellor of the exchequer. Next came the two very able millionaires, Jews, Sir Alfred Mond and Edwin S. Montagu, and so on to the second raters. Together these represent liberalism and Toryism in about equal sections. Their one party principle is allegiance to Lloyd George, coupled with success at the forthcoming election.

The program will be of a gently progressive nature, but strongly anti-socialistic and anti-communistic. Opposition to bolshevism will be one of its chief planks. Moderate social reform will loom large. This party Lloyd George will lead unchallenged. It will undoubtedly attract an enormous amount of support throughout the country, particularly among women, to whom the old party names mean little or nothing.

That is the career of Tino Pattiera, tenor, making his American debut here with Mary Garden's opera company.

This young Delmarian, who two years ago sang his way into the heart of a Silesian countess, today is becoming more and more recognized as truly great.

Independently wealthy, owner of a castle and the husband of Countess Hedwig Schaffgotsch, he abandoned other ambitions to sing.

Hero And Lover. On and off the stage Pattiera is essentially a hero.

But above all he is the lover. "The countess" name is ever on his lips. It was at the opera in Breslau they met.

Pattiera was singing in Paganelli. She saw. She heard. An introduction followed.

"Ah, it was the love at first sight," said Pattiera, pounding his breast in the region of his heart.

"I love her much, much, much! I sing more to her! Now I am husband."

Wife Coming Over. He is 31. She is 25. Letters could not appease the heartaches of separation.

"I want you," he wrote. "Come over here to this beautiful land and I will sing to you again." She is coming.

In early youth Pattiera sang in the village choir. His father was a small merchant.

To satisfy a family demand he prepared for the law. But the urge of music was too great.

"I like America best," says Pattiera. "I shall ask my wife to stay here and live. It is best that we do."
